4. Ethical responsibility of the Authors

The opinions and statements appearing in the articles are the sole responsibility of authors, and are expected to ensure quality, scientific rigor and respect for copyright and intellectual property rights in the articles they submit to the journal.

The articles must be original and unpublished and should not be simultaneously in the process of evaluation, or have editorial commitments with any other publishing house.

- It is the responsibility of the authors to avoid any conflict of interest in the publication of data and results (financial, institutional, collaborative, or other relationships between evaluators and authors).

- The authors must give the credits to people or institutions that have participated in the research.

- If the authors include in their article excerpts from previous works, they should be cited and referenced so they do not incur plagiarism.

- The selection and final approval of an article will depend on the academic concept of peer reviewers and the willingness of the authors to make the modifications within the deadlines established by Hojas y Hablas Editorial Board.

- If any of the academic pairs requests changes, the authors commit to make the adjustments within the term indicated by the Editorial Board of the Journal.

- If an author finds a fault or inaccuracy in the content of his/her published article, it will be his/her responsibility to inform the Editorial Board of Hojas y Hablas Journal.

5. Process of evaluation and opinion by the academic evaluators

- Every original article published by Hojas y Hablas Journal will undergo a process of review and evaluation by two (2) peers or academic arbitrators specialized in the area covered by the journal.

- The peers can be members of the publishing entity - La Unimonserrate- as well as other national or international Higher Education Institutions.

- The evaluation process is “doubly blind”, in which neither authors nor peers know their respective identities.

- If both pairs accept the article with or without modifications and the author accepts them, the article is published.
- If an article is rejected by one of the peer reviewers, the Editorial Board of the Journal will designate a third evaluator.
- If the third evaluator accepts with modifications and the author accepts them, the article is published
- If the third evaluator accepts with modifications, but the author does not accept them, the article is not published.
- If the third evaluator rejects, the article is not published.
- If the article is rejected by one of the two peers, the Hojas y Hablas Journal editor will assign a third evaluator to settle if the paper will be published.

6. Ethical responsibility of the Evaluating Peers. The Evaluation Pairs commit:

- To accept only the jobs that correspond to their academic specialty.
- To do a second reading to evaluate if their suggestions for changes and / or adjustments have been taken into account by the authors.
- To respect the confidentiality of the opinion of the articles.
- To do strictly academic evaluations.
- Not to disseminate by any means the content received for review.
- To inform the Editorial Board of the Journal if they evidence plagiarism in the materials they are reviewing.
- To inform if the material to be evaluated in whole or in part may conflict with their own investigations.
- Not to use the information contained in the manuscripts for personal investigations.

- To review the works objectively, indicating the reasons for the rejection, as well as the clarity and coherence in the orientation to the authors to improve the article.
 - To deliver the evaluation within the deadlines agreed with the Editorial Board of the Journal.
- All Evaluating Pair will have a Master's degree or PhD.
